

Eagle-girl

Jodie Callahan, Grade 7

Fort Hall

Once there was a little girl. She was only five when she went into the deep forest. When she was walking she found an eagle feather. She picked it up and took it home. When her father came she showed it to him and he said that she can keep it and pin it up on the wall. He didn't know that it was bad to pin it up on the wall.

That night when they were sleeping the little girl woke up scared because she heard something banging on the wall and went to her father's room. While her father was walking in the other room, the little girl saw something in the window. It was looking in. She screamed and her father came back running. He looked and got freaked out. He got his gun and told the little girl to stay and sit on the couch, and he said, "If you hear anything don't go out, if I say open the door, don't do it."

So he went around the house and the little girls heard something telling her to answer the door. It had her father's voice. She was so scared that she forgot what her father told her. She opened the door and a thing grabbed her and flew off into the sky. Her father saw it and cried. After that it got all quite and then something blew out all the windows.

The father called the police and told them what happened and they put up a missing sign all over the town. They looked for the little girl for a long time. They never saw her again.

The father lived sad but not all the time because one day he saw an eagle flying around the house and he knew that it was his little girl, and it was a powerful thing. She was checking if her dad was ok.
