Art Response

It makes me feel dizzy. Shapes overlapping like the sea. But this is brighter. There are lots of fragments of circles that look like they are trying to get back with all its other pieces, but they are interrupted by rectangles and squares that are blue, yellow, red, or orange. This painting makes me feel unhappy. The image that it gives me is a mother trying to find her children, but she never finds them. There is one big circle and it stays connected, but inside it is divided into many parts that are different colors. It reminds me of the world, divided into many lands and religions, traditions and races, but still it is one whole, one big world bringing everyone together.
