Trees Waving Hello

Once there was a forest of big green trees and they were waving hello to the world. Everyone was coming to see the trees because they thought they looked very interesting. The trees were waving hello because they were happy and loved their home. Their home had lots of wild deer and other animals. Every Christmas the trees would have beautiful lights because the people decorated them. The trees felt very happy and lucky they had a great home to live in. Then, there was a big storm. After the storm, the trees were still happy because there wasn't too much damage. They had a good life after the storm.
